

Advertisement manager's report June 2022

As of the AGM, Phil and I ceased to be ASPRA committee members. After six years of scratching our heads over what has become The Addiscombe Magazine, we decided not to stand for re-election as editor and ad manager. We said at the time that we would produce the Summer issue and looked forward to handing over the reins.

For many reasons beyond our control, putting this last issue together has taken far longer than we hoped. It will now be distributed in July, rather than June as we intended. As I write, we are still mulling over ideas for the cover and nailing down those last few ads. And as far as I know, nobody has actually stepped forward yet to take up the red pen and green eyeshade or order book and practised foot in the door...

So it's a fond goodbye from both of us. We've made a lot of friends over the last six years, but we're really looking forward to reading the magazine under new management.

That's it. Sayonara, and thank you all.
